Eco-volunteer, gap year project

1. The nature of our contact

We have found our volunteer project thanks to some researchs on Instagram social network. Quite simply, we sent a message to explain the purpose of our project during the gap year. Then, our contact, M. Carlos L. Tamayo nicely answered to our proposition and we have arranged a phone meeting with him to talk about the help he needs for his association. Carlos and his father are the leaders of the Curma Association in San Juan City, La Union, Phillipines. They sensibilize the local population and organize environmental actions about the local fauna and flora. For example, the protection an release of baby turtles is a big part of their activity.

2. Nature of their missions

- Sensibilization of San Juan's children about environment and waste management
- Picking turtle eggs on the beach
- Take care of the turtles waiting for their birth
- Release the baby turtles

This project will last 8 weeks.
